

halid rested a hand on his son's shoulder.
"I'm happy, Zayd." He smiled.

But not because of your examination results.
Not the letter A written on your exam paper.
It's not because you never stopped trying.
It's not because you overcame a lot of hurdles and challenges to finally achieve good grades.

He paused before speaking again.

"I'm happy, Zayd, because you are of a great moral character."

Zayd looked at his father's face with a blank stare.
