

“The man who built... the Kaabah?”

Khalid nodded. “Yes.”

“The very boy who grew into a man that questioned the stars, the moon, the sun, the idols, and the beliefs of his people...”

“...was the very man Allah honored with rebuilding His Sacred House.”

He let the words settle.

“You see, my son... Allah is never threatened by sincere questions.

He already knows what is inside our hearts. He knows the difference between someone who questions because they are arrogant...

...and someone who questions because they are searching for the truth.”

Khalid smiled.

“Prophet Ibrahim’s questions didn’t distance him from Allah. They brought him closer.”
