

ayd looked up and said gently.

“Because someone once told me. If the medication helps me become a person that perform prayers, remembers Allah more, and in general, become a better Muslim...than everything else does not matter. Not what other people think, not the side effects, not the self guilt of feeling like I’m cheating. Nothing else matters”

“My first priority should always be to please Allah.”

Khalid smiled. “Now Zayd, can you give me the reason why I am happy with you? Why i see you as a great moral character?”

Zayd shook his head.

“Let me help you find the answer then.”
