

MERCY

— Dedication —

To My Parents

Shahrani Anuar & Sepiah Ibrahim

The world may never know what you have done for me.

But I do.

Thank you for every sacrifice that no one saw.

For every prayer whispered when I wasn't listening.

For every lesson you taught without expecting anything in return.

If there is any goodness in me today, it began in the home you built.

I have never felt that I deserved parents like you, yet Allah blessed me with both of you.

Everything I become will always carry a part of your love, your patience, and your example.

Thank you. I love both of you.

To My Wife

Some people spend their lives searching for someone who will stay. Allah gave me you.

Thank you for your patience.

Thank you for taking care of me, and for loving our children with all your heart.

Life with me has not always been easy.

Living with me is like riding a roller-coaster that never truly stops.

Some people cannot get off the ride, however much they wish they could.

Yet you chose to stay.

Not because the journey was easy, but because your mercy was greater than the hardships we faced.

Your love has been one of Allah's greatest gifts in my life.

I pray that He rewards every tear, every sacrifice, and every silent act of kindness that only He knows.

I love you.

Always.
